TWSE warmly hosted 2025 AOSEF General Assembly, featuring a new era of global connectivity in capital markets

The 2025 General Assembly of the Asian and Oceanian Stock Exchanges Federation (AOSEF) concluded successfully in Taipei on March 25. Hosted by the Taiwan Stock Exchange (TWSE), the event brought together delegates from 17 exchanges across Asia to explore the future of regional capital market development through productive exchanges and collaboration.

Yen-Liang Chen, Vice Chairperson of Taiwan's Financial Supervisory Commission, emphasized the importance of regional cooperation in the Asia-Pacific to attract global capital amidst the rapid evolution of digital finance, sustainability, and cross-border capital flows. He highlighted Taiwan's steady capital market growth over the past decade and its resilience amid global supply chain restructuring. Chen also outlined Taiwan's commitment to the Asian Asset Management Center initiative, aiming to position Taiwan as a key hub for capital and wealth management in Asia through a six-year, three-stage plan: observe progress in two years, transform in four, and achieve in six.

Sherman Lin, Chairman of the TWSE, welcomed delegates in his opening remarks, highlighting AOSEF's long-standing commitment to regional cooperation. Despite global market challenges, Asian markets continue to drive growth and innovation. Chairman Lin emphasized Taiwan's strong capital market performance, fueled by the AI boom and rapid ETF development, achieving record highs in market capitalization and trading volume.

The event also featured compelling keynote speeches delivered by Mr. Chris Hung, Senior Industry Consultant and Director General of the Market Intelligence & Consulting Institute at the Institute for Information Industry, and Mr. Tsung Sheng Liu, Chairman of the Securities Investment Trust & Consulting Association. Centered on AI and ETFs, their presentations highlighted Taiwan's competitive advantages and growth potential within the global AI industry chain and the rapidly expanding ETF market, providing valuable insights to the attendees.

This year's General Assembly not only strengthened in-depth engagement among AOSEF members but also showcased the development strength and future potential of Taiwan's capital market. Looking ahead, the TWSE will continue to advance regional collaboration among exchanges, fostering innovation within Asian capital markets and jointly paving the way toward a new era of sustainable growth.
