Taiwan Stock Exchange and Taipei Exchange Partner with Ernst & Young Securities to Promote High-Quality Enterprises Entering the Capital Market ended successfully

The Taiwan Stock Exchange (TWSE) and the Taipei Exchange (TPEx) have joined forces to shape the future of Taiwan's capital market and have established the "Capital Market Service Team" to integrate resources and create a one-stop service platform. This initiative aims to strengthen the development of Taiwan's capital markets and advance toward the goals of becoming both an "Asian Asset Management Center" and an "Asia Innovation Capital." On November 28, 2025, the TWSE and TPEx partnered with Ernst & Young to host the 2025 Forum on Supporting Quality Enterprises Entering the Capital Market. The event provides comprehensive services for enterprises of all sizes—large, medium, and small—enabling companies to quickly gain a full understanding of the capital market landscape and access professional advisory channels.

TWSE Senior Executive Vice President Brenda Hu highlighted in his opening remarks that going public can help companies expand, attract top talent, and enhance their international visibility. With foreign investors holding 47% of Taiwan's market capitalization, and supported by a comprehensive supply chain and world-leading technology industries, investors in Taiwan have a deep understanding of sectors such as technology, AI, biomedical innovation, and other emerging industries. This enables them to provide fair valuations and long-term capital that support corporate growth. Hu also noted that Taiwan's capital market is highly active, with strong participation from global institutional investors, which further strengthens listed companies' brand visibility and international collaboration opportunities.

To help companies successfully enter the capital market, the TWSE provides support at every critical stage of the listing process. This includes pre-IPO guidance, clear and transparent review standards, as well as post-listing assistance in ESG, corporate governance, and international visibility. Companies also benefit from diversified services such as the IR zone and the Carbon Credit Exchange. Underwriters and CPAs further support companies by planning the listing timeline and establishing sound financial and internal-control systems. With this comprehensive professional team accompanying them throughout the listing journey, companies are empowered to transform and elevate themselves—ultimately entering the capital market and shining even brighter on the global stage.

Chief Administrative Officer Linda Lin of the TPEx stated in her remarks that As the exchange with the most extensive experience in supporting small and medium-sized enterprises, the Taipei Exchange (TPEx) has long been committed to building a multifunctional and multi-tiered stock exchange designed for companies of different sizes and at various stages of development. Its market structure includes the Go Incubation Board (GISA) tailored for micro-enterprises, the Emerging Stock Board as a pre-main-board platform, and the Main Board for OTC listing. To date, TPEx has helped more than 2,600 companies enter the capital market.

The TPEx Main Board offers two key advantages—strong trading liquidity and healthy average price-to-earnings ratios—along with high fundraising efficiency. To further cultivate a friendly listing environment, TPEx continues to optimize its application procedures, such as allowing companies to complete the public-offering process concurrently with their Emerging Stock Board application, thereby shortening the overall timeline to listing. With a comprehensive and diversified industrial ecosystem, TPEx looks forward to welcoming more high-quality companies to leverage its versatile and supportive market environment, enhance their visibility, and achieve more stable and long-term growth.

EY Taiwan Managing Partner Andrew Fuh noted, In guiding clients toward listing on the capital market, we have found that entering the public market is one of the best decisions a company can make. Whether it is enhancing brand visibility, attracting talent, raising capital, strengthening internal controls, expanding into new markets, or pursuing long-term sustainability, going public consistently proves to be the right choice. As a member of the Capital Market Service Team, EY provides one-stop, integrated support throughout this entire journey. From digital transformation and investment-structure planning, to establishing financial reporting and internal-control systems, as well as strengthening corporate governance, EY offers comprehensive services. We are committed to accompanying companies through every stage of the listing process—all the way to the finish line.

The forum also featured practical insights from two companies: Mr. Edward Lin, CFO the spokesperson of listed company Syntec Technology Co., Ltd., and Mr. Wu Yu-hsun, Chairman of EASTERN UNION INTERACTIVE CORP. Both speakers shared hands-on experiences from their listing journeys and discussed how listing has benefited their business development. EY Taiwan Assurance Partner Wells Cheng shared key considerations and financial planning insights for the listing process, and outlined important issues across internal controls, taxation, finance, regulatory compliance, and ESG.

Through direct, face-to-face engagement with companies, the TWSE aims to strengthen two-way communication and, via this seminar, deliver the latest capital-market policies and practical developments to industry participants, helping enterprises gain a clearer understanding of the listing process. The event brought together market experts and representatives from successfully listed companies to share frontline insights and professional guidance, enabling participating firms to better navigate and prepare for their own listing journey and encourage more high-potential companies to enter the capital market, inject new growth momentum into Taiwan's economy, and continue driving the market toward greater stability, innovation, and sustainability.
